"The future of the world's climate likely depends on Australia realising its superpower potential."

Rod Sims AO — Chair, The Superpower Institute. IGCC Summit, November 2024.

"The world still needs the technology, goods, and services to support decarbonisation. With our access to capital, natural resources, and capacity for innovation, Australia is well poised to capitalise on that demand."

The Hon Matt Kean — Chair, Climate Change Authority. IGCC Summit, November 2024.

Introducing This Year's Event.

In collaboration with:

A Message from our Chairs.

Stephen Dunne IGCC Chairman & Cbus Super Fund Board Director & Chairman of the Investment Committee

Sophia Cheng AIGCC Chair & Chief Investment Officer, Cathay Financial Holdings

As we look ahead to the IGCC 2025 Summit, we invite you to partner with us for a truly special event — our 20th anniversary.

Over the past two decades, IGCC and its members across Australia, Asia, and New Zealand have been at the forefront of climate action, driving collaboration, innovation, and leadership to accelerate investment for a net zero economy. This milestone Summit — themed Mission Transition — offers a unique opportunity to reflect on that progress, hear from industry veterans who shaped today's landscape, and celebrate collective achievements.

But this is more than a celebration of the past. Mission Transition underscores our focus on the present and future, recognising that climate action has become the most significant economic conversation of our time — unlocking unparalleled opportunities in the greatest economic transformation of the century.

Amid changes in the international political landscape, Australia is riding some of the strongest economic tailwinds in its history. Traditionally known as "the lucky country," Australia's abundant resources like iron ore have fuelled decades of prosperity. Today, with a strong comparative advantage in vast land, renewable energy sources, and growing global demand for decarbonisation solutions, we stand at a crossroads — with the opportunity to supply up to 10% of the world's decarbonisation needs and emerge as a superpower in the energy transition.

For investors ready to seize this moment, the message from key industry leaders at IGCC's 2024 Summit was loud and clear: the policy track is already being laid — so remain focused, gear up, and pick up the pace.

Unlocking this potential demands partnerships between Australian and Asia-based investors, where Asia's clean energy demand aligns with Australia's resources and ambitions. This year's program spotlights the Asia-Australia relationship, leveraging IGCC's regional influence and expertise through our sister organisation, the Asia Investor Group on Climate Change. By bringing together investors from across the APAC region, we'll strengthen collaboration, showcase regional investment opportunities and tackle the shared challenge of accelerating the energy transition.

By joining us as a partner, you will not only be part of an event that celebrates 20 years of progress — you will play a vital role in shaping the next chapter of climate finance and investment.

We look forward to welcoming you to this landmark Summit and collaborating with you to make it an event to remember.

About the Summit.

Features regional and international keynotes, panels with industry experts, climate solutions from across the region and extensive networking opportunities.

1. Our Singular Focus on Climate & Investment

The summit program draws on our fundamental core business; helping our members manage climate risks and accelerate the flow of capital to climate opportunities. Each month, we workshop, publish resources, and network with investors, researchers, and decision-makers across business and policy. That year-round work is distilled into this unique event specifically designed for industry professionals.

3. A Deeper Understanding

Our conference is the region's most credible forum where speakers cover the intricacies of climate-related investing, going far beyond the mainstream discussions. It is specially curated for professionals who need a deeper, more comprehensive understanding to keep growing their climate practice.

2. The Most Important New Developments

Drawing on our experience and extensive network across finance, policymaking, research, and business, we identify the most important developments in climate change finance and investment. These insights offer an exclusive experience to keep attendees at the forefront of this complex and rapidly evolving landscape.

4. A Premier Networking Experience

Attendees can access unparalleled networking opportunities, connecting with policymakers, politicians, and decision-makers across business and the financial sector. These invaluable connections and sophisticated conversations will influence the future of the industry.
